

Matthew Wiswall is Professor of Economics at New York University. Professor Wiswall is an applied microeconomist who conducts research on child development, education, and applied econometric methodologies. His research has been funded by the US National Science Foundation, US Department of Education, William T. Grant Foundation, and the Smith Richardson Foundation, published in leading journals including the Journal of Political Economy, Review of Economic Studies, and Quarterly Journal of Economics, and cited in several media outlets including the New York Times and Wall Street Journal. He is a Faculty Research Associate of the National Bureau of Economics, and previously an Associate Editor of Econometrica and Quantitative Economics. Professor Wiswall received his PhD in economics from the University of California-Los Angeles in 2005, and previously held faculty positions at Arizona State University, the University of Wisconsin-Madison where he was Professor of Economics and the David Edwin and Lucille Hartmann Davies Chair, and Johns Hopkins University where he was the Steven M. Kaye Professor of Economics.